

CF Ruffer Total Return Fund

Positive absolute returns with low volatility

During June the fund price fell by 1.0%. This compares with a fall of 2.5% in the FTSE All-Share Index and a 2.0% fall in the FTSE All-Stocks Index (both figures total returns in sterling).

The month of June saw politics very much taking centre-stage, most obviously in the UK. Prime Minister May's failed attempt to increase her authority through a snap general election, and the resurgence of Jeremy Corbyn's new/old Labour party, may threaten a changing of the guard that is technically strictly local to these shores, but it is one that we believe could well have wider ramifications for investors. Putting to one side the uncertainty this has created both domestically and regarding Brexit negotiations, what we are witnessing in the UK is a shift towards more populist policies and away from austerity that seems likely to be echoed across the western democracies, albeit at differing speeds. The end result of this, it seems to us, will be inflation, as the only palatable way to address the debt and inequalities built up over recent decades.

Meanwhile in the theatre of monetary policy, until so recently star billing above mere politics, the leading players appeared to compete with each other this month in transmitting contradictory messages. In the UK and eurozone, where almost no change in interest rates had been imagined for the foreseeable future, uncertainty was suddenly priced in, the result being a sharp uptick in bond yields and interest rate expectations. This has not been a helpful background for our long-dated index-linked gilts, but it is something we had anticipated occurring. Accordingly we have prepared the portfolio to cope with the temporary setbacks and volatility that such 'noise' over interest rates may bring. So, whilst the index-linked bonds declined during the month, our small but potent interest rate options gained in value to offset this.

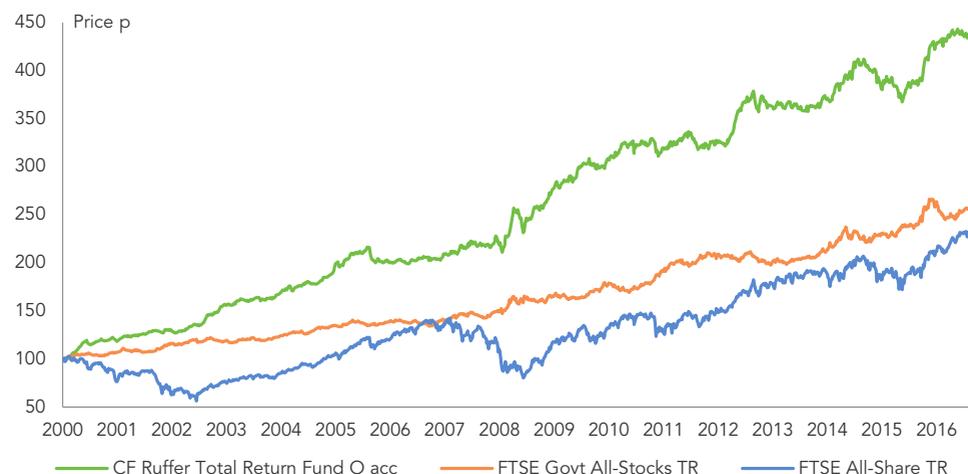

It is unlikely to have escaped notice that, after a strong performance in 2016 (when the fund made 13.7%), we have been doing a fair impression of marching on the spot so far this year. We are used to this, and whilst suitably apologetic over missing out on apparently easy gains in equities this year, do not regret our cautious stance. Following last year's brief flirtation with reflation, which saw bond yields rise and cyclical/value stocks making gains, this year investors have flocked back to the 'new normal' universe of bond-like equities (consumer staples) and growth (tech). Introducing uncertainty over interest rates, bond yields and inflation is to say the least unlikely to be supportive of either equities in general or these crowded trades in particular. Therefore we are content to remain somewhat on the sidelines for the time being, with equities restricted to around 40% of the portfolio and those equities biased towards value and cyclical stocks. It may just be anecdotal, but in a market where there are now more equity indices and ETFs (Exchange Traded Funds) than there are US stocks to populate them, and with many of these ETFs oriented to low volatility or bond-like strategies, we think being rather dull for a while may not be a sin.

The fund's prospectus and key investor information documents are provided in English and available on request or from www.ruffer.co.uk. Please note that CF Ruffer Investment Funds is a UK UCITS. The CF Ruffer Total Return Fund is not registered for distribution in any country other than the UK. In line with the Prospectus, it is possible that at any one time the CF Ruffer Total Return Fund may invest more than 35% of its assets in transferable securities issued or guaranteed by an EEA state, one or more local authorities, a third country or a public international body to which one or more EEA States belong. The only aforementioned securities where Ruffer would currently consider holding more than 35% would be UK or US government issued transferable securities.

Investment objective

The fund aims to achieve low volatility, positive returns from an actively managed portfolio of different asset classes, including equities, bonds and currencies. Capital invested is at risk and there is no guarantee that a positive return will be delivered over any one or a number of twelve-month periods. The fund may also invest in collective investment schemes, cash, money market instruments, other transferable securities and derivatives and forward transactions. Pervading this objective is a fundamental philosophy of capital preservation.
