

LF Ruffer Total Return Fund

Positive absolute returns with low volatility

During September, the fund price was broadly flat. This compares with a rise of 0.7% in the FTSE All-Share Index and a fall of 1.5% in the FTSE Govt All Stocks index (all figures total returns in sterling).

It is striking how little change there has been to the narrative of financial markets in the last two years. As global growth continues to recover and unemployment falls, there are two key questions for investors: a) Is the global economy strong enough to tolerate higher interest rates? b) What will be the impact on financial markets as liquidity conditions tighten? This dilemma continues to play out against a backdrop of rising political tensions: chief amongst these are Brexit, Italian budgets and trade wars. The same questions were asked as Donald Trump came to power in 2016 and despite having seen eight interest rate hikes from the Federal Reserve in this cycle, it is still no clearer at what point this tightening starts to bite and has a material negative impact on asset prices.

For much of September, the strength of the global economy dominated sentiment. The prospect of higher rates and steeper yield curves saw bonds fall and equity markets rotate towards more economically sensitive areas: oil majors, commodities and financials provided market leadership. Japanese equities benefited and stresses in emerging markets, which haunted markets for much of the summer, temporarily receded. This came to an abrupt end on the penultimate day of the month with the announcement of the Italian budget. As had been feared, the populist coalition announced plans for a budget deficit three times that previously forecast, threatening to break eurozone budget rules. Risk assets turned abruptly, with bond yields and European equities falling sharply. The Italian government pointed to the additional growth this fiscal splurge would generate – strikingly similar to the narrative of the Trump administration two years earlier. This time around, markets were less forgiving principally because of the likelihood of overshooting the new deficit target, but also because of the fragilities of the single currency. This reaction further highlights the risk in markets: the global economy is fine, but as global policy tightens, the weakest links are being punished in a way they weren't in recent years.

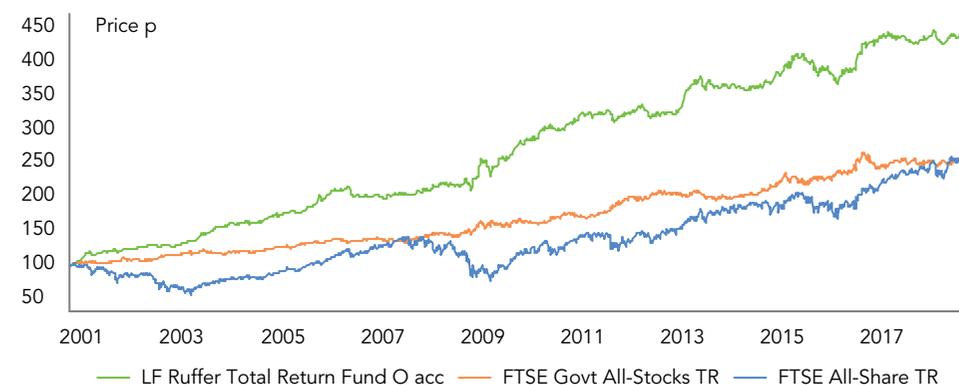

Despite remaining cautious of markets, and steadfast in the need for protection, we continue to be of the view that the global economy remains robust, hence our preference for cyclical equities. The risk is that this economic strength may sow the seeds of the next crisis: we saw how this logic could unfold in February. According to Jerome Powell, stable inflation expectations are key to preventing a revenge of the Phillips curve; the danger being that as the recovery continues the Fed may have to move more aggressively than its governors or the market currently think necessary.

The fund's prospectus and key investor information documents are provided in English and available on request or from www.ruffer.co.uk. Please note that LF Ruffer Investment Funds is a UK UCITS. The LF Ruffer Total Return Fund is not registered for distribution in any country other than the UK. In line with the Prospectus, it is possible that at any one time the LF Ruffer Total Return Fund may invest more than 35% of its assets in transferable securities issued or guaranteed by an EEA state, one or more local authorities, a third country or a public international body to which one or more EEA States belong. The only aforementioned securities where Ruffer would currently consider holding more than 35% would be UK or US government issued transferable securities.

Investment objective

The fund aims to achieve low volatility, positive returns from an actively managed portfolio of different asset classes, including equities, bonds and currencies. Capital invested is at risk and there is no guarantee that a positive return will be delivered over any one or a number of twelve-month periods. The fund may also invest in collective investment schemes, cash, money market instruments, other transferable securities and derivatives and forward transactions. Pervading this objective is a fundamental philosophy of capital preservation.
