

Ruffer Total Return International

Positive returns with low volatility

O class April 2020 Issue 106

During April, the fund price rose by 5.9%. This compared with a rise of 5.0% in the FTSE All-Share Index and an increase of 1.5% in the FTSE Govt All Stocks Index (all figures total returns in sterling).

April was very much the yang to March's yin, with the US stock market moving from the fastest fall since the Great Depression (in March) to the largest monthly rise since 1987. Following the significant pivot in portfolio positioning in the second half of March the portfolio was able to capture much of the available upside (it is the fourth highest monthly return in the fund's nine year history), whilst remaining appropriately defensively positioned.

Gold and gold mining equities (+2.9%) accounted for nearly half of the portfolio's return. We topped up this area in mid-March as various levered retail gold miner exchange-traded funds (ETFs) imploded, leaving attractive stock prices in their wake. The miners have rebounded strongly and indeed one of the names we added to, Newmont Corp, is the best performing company in the S&P 500 so far this year, handsomely outperforming the 'FANG' names (Facebook, Amazon, Netflix, Google) that are for now the market darlings. The next largest contributor was inflation-linked bonds (+2.0%), as long-dated bond yields continued to be squashed down by the largest central bank buying programmes ever seen, followed closely by the equity allocation as a whole (+2.0%). On the other side of the ledger were the unconventional portfolio protections (-1.0%): after we took significant profits in March, these provided a lesser headwind to performance.

Where next for markets? Liquidity argues for higher prices, while economic fundamentals argue for lower prices. On the one hand, the veritable torrent of monetary and fiscal stimulus squeezes stocks and bonds higher; on the other, all the money one saves by being locked at home represents all of someone else's lost revenues. For now the balance appears to be in favour of price appreciation; we would only caution that if markets run significantly higher, politicians and central bankers may be faced with the exceptionally toxic combination of both stock markets and unemployment at record highs, and it is likely that they will amend or withdraw accommodative market policy in favour of policies that benefit workers rather than corporates.

Reflecting this and other concerns, we have over the last six weeks added more yen to the protective armoury. A number of factors argue for yen strength, and this appreciation would be turbo-charged if further distress or defaults were seen in the US corporate credit market, as Japanese investors repatriate their significant investments there. Worldwide, it is the currency that looks most like gold and is therefore deserving of a significant allocation.

In line with the Prospectus, it is possible that at any one time Ruffer Total Return International may invest more than 35% of its assets in transferable securities issued or guaranteed by an EEA state, one or more local authorities, a third country or a public international body to which one or more EEA States belong. The only aforementioned securities where Ruffer would currently consider holding more than 35% would be UK or US government issued transferable securities.

Investment objective

The investment objective of Ruffer Total Return International ('the fund') is to achieve positive returns with low volatility from an actively managed portfolio. The fund may have exposure to the following asset classes: cash, debt securities of any type (including government and corporate debt), equities and equity related securities and commodities (including precious metals). Pervading this objective is a fundamental philosophy of capital preservation.
