An alternative to alternative asset management

During April the Company's net asset value rose by 0.2%. This compares with a fall of 0.4% in the FTSE All-Share Total Return Index.

April saw a major shock for the UK political commentariat; against expectations and with no prior leak Prime Minister Theresa May announced a snap UK general election for 8 June. Sterling, which has been the lightning conductor for sentiment towards the UK since last year's EU vote, rallied on the news as investors moved to price in the possibility of some form of transitional arrangement after the UK's exit. The company continues to have substantial exposure to sterling; as well as considering the UK's currency undervalued, we also continue to find few attractive protective qualities in non-sterling currencies that would justify holding them.

Across the English Channel there was an almost equal surprise; the first round of voting for the French presidential election actually produced an outcome in line with the pollsters. If that phenomenon repeats itself, then at the time of writing the centrist candidate, M. Macron, should defeat Mme. Le Pen from the Front National in the run off. While eurozone equity markets surged in relief following the first round results, it remains unclear whether the political novelty of M. Macron will overcome the likelihood that the French parliamentary elections next month produce an outcome that results in a period of impasse and gridlock, thereby delaying much-needed reform.

Away from political developments what seems clear is that while economies may not be growing at the rates desired by politicians and electorates, they continue in general to heal. The US economy, while experiencing its now seemingly customary first quarter softness continues to chug along, eurozone indicators are at a six-year high, and while the Chinese economy might have long-term structural issues, it presently continues to defy talk of an abrupt cyclical slowdown. The exception to this might be the UK, where the return of inflation appears to be dulling consumers' enthusiasm via stagnant real earnings. Taken together these factors encourage us to keep the faith in terms of our equity selection, favouring financial and cyclical exposure over 'bond-like' equities, even admitting that such a view has not been rewarded this year, as investors' hopes for economic recovery have waned.

Where that scepticism around growth is clearly most rife concerns the US. Fading hopes for imminent tax cuts, coupled with resounding silence on possible infrastructure spending, have prompted a rethink as to whether the arrival of President Trump genuinely represents a major change. We continue to believe that the next chapter of the post-crisis narrative will see greater involvement by government, with all the inflation risk inherent in a growing role for fiscal policy. In the meantime inflation indicators in most jurisdictions are coming in higher than forecast, sharpening policy dilemmas for central banks. All of this speaks to a risk of higher volatility in markets, as well as cementing our view that inflation-linked bonds must sit at the core of our asset allocation for the foreseeable future.
