An alternative to alternative asset management

December 2017 Issue 151

During December, the net asset value (NAV) of the Company rose by 1.3%. This compared with a rise of 4.8% in the FTSE All-Share Index TR.

So how should one characterise the performance for the year? The total return NAV of 2.2% in the final quarter was respectable given our investment objectives, but did not make up for an otherwise disappointing year when we only managed to eke out a return of 1.6%. In 2017 all major asset classes rose in value, and data for the last 90 years reveals it as being the only year in which US equities, measured by the S&P index, rose every month. With volatility nailed down at multi-decade lows, momentum was unsurprisingly the most successful investment style. In terms of our equity selection, our upbeat economic views, plus consideration of valuation, took us towards cyclical and financial stocks and away from the 'bond like' equities and technology darlings that provided the market leadership. We were right on the economy, but, in hindsight, wrong that the rise in bond yields that greeted the Trump victory in November 2016 would fizzle out quite so early in 2017 and not revive. While others made far superior returns, we do not regret the positions we held. Reflecting our primary investment objective of capital preservation, we will always hold protective assets; the difference these days in a world of zero interest rates is that they have a cost rather than yielding a small positive return.

In the last month, after many false starts, President Trump finally chalked up a legislative victory through his tax reform bill. Its headline feature is a reduction in the US corporation tax rate from 35% to 21%; further measures within the package reduce capital allowances over time, and therefore may spur an acceleration of capital expenditures in 2018. For this and other reasons, some have seen the legislation as providing economic stimulus to an economy already near its capacity limits, and therefore as taking unnecessary risks with inflation and the public finances. Indeed, companies such as Wells Fargo, AT&T and Comcast are all raising employee earnings as a direct response to the measures. Be that as it may, markets preferred to look on the bright side, taking equity and commodity prices generally higher through the month, while bond yields remained broadly quiescent.

As we enter 2018, much of the commentary seems to call for more of the same in terms of the investment backdrop. While we are no more competent at market timing than the next person, we feel such an outcome is unlikely, not least given the fact that stability has the inconvenient propensity of begetting instability. If economic growth surges, inflationary bonfires emerge and central banks are deemed to be behind the curve, then our equity selection and interest rate swaptions should perform. If the 'Minsky moment' arrives, and markets fall sharply then while the company's equity holdings will not be immune from damage, our equity protections should soar in value. If there is an economic relapse, then the likely fiscal response will boost inflation expectations. While the portfolio obviously cannot prepare for every eventuality, we are trying to address the difficult questions that others are shying away from and we would like to think that at least some of the major risks are covered, whilst leaving enough on the table to generate positive returns going forward.

Investment objective

The principal objective of the Company is to achieve a positive total annual return, after all expenses, of at least twice the Bank of England Bank Rate by investing predominantly in internationally listed or quoted equities or equity related securities (including convertibles) or bonds which are issued by corporate issuers, supranationals or government organisations.
