An alternative to alternative asset management

During June the Company's net asset value fell by 0.5%. This compares with a fall of 2.5% in the FTSE All-Share Total Return Index.

The month of June saw politics very much taking centre-stage, most obviously in the UK. Prime Minister May's failed attempt to increase her authority through a snap general election, and the resurgence of Jeremy Corbyn's new/old Labour party, may threaten a changing of the guard that is technically strictly local to these shores, but it is one that we believe could well have wider ramifications for investors. Putting to one side the uncertainty this has created both domestically and regarding Brexit negotiations, what we are witnessing in the UK is a shift towards more populist policies and away from austerity that seems likely to be echoed across the western democracies, albeit at differing speeds. The end result of this, it seems to us, will be inflation, as the only palatable way to address the debt and inequalities built up over recent decades.

Meanwhile in the theatre of monetary policy, until so recently star billing above mere politics, the leading players appeared to compete with each other this month in transmitting contradictory messages. In the UK and eurozone, where almost no change in interest rates had been imagined for the foreseeable future, uncertainty was suddenly priced in, the result being a sharp uptick in bond yields and interest rate expectations. This has not been a helpful background for our long-dated index-linked gilts, but it is something we had anticipated occurring. Accordingly we have prepared the portfolio to cope with the temporary setbacks and volatility that such 'noise' over interest rates may bring. So, whilst the index-linked bonds declined during the month, our small but potent interest rate options gained in value to offset this.

It is unlikely to have escaped notice that, after a strong performance in 2016 (when the total return was 12%), we have been doing a fair impression of marching on the spot so far this year. We are used to this, and whilst suitably apologetic over missing out on apparently easy gains in equities this year, do not regret our cautious stance. Following last year's brief flirtation with reflation, which saw bond yields rise and cyclical/value stocks making gains, this year investors have flocked back to the 'new normal' universe of bond-like equities (consumer staples) and growth (tech). Introducing uncertainty over interest rates, bond yields and inflation is to say the least unlikely to be supportive of either equities in general or these crowded trades in particular. Therefore we are content to remain somewhat on the side-lines for the time being, with equities restricted to around 40% of the portfolio and those equities biased towards value and cyclical stocks. It may just be anecdotal, but in a market where there are now more equity indices and ETFs (Exchange Traded Funds) than there are US stocks to populate them and with many of these ETFs oriented to low volatility or bond-like strategies, we think being rather dull for a while may not be a sin.
