

LF Ruffer Absolute Return Fund

Positive absolute returns with low volatility

The share price of the LF Ruffer Absolute Return Fund C accumulation shares rose by 1.9% in June. This compared with a rise of 3.7% in the FTSE All-Share Index, and a decline of -0.2% in the FTSE All Stocks Index.

Following January's handbrake turn on the path of interest rates by the US Federal Reserve, 2019 has so far been a profitable year for most investors, and the fund has benefited, appreciating by 4.7%. Equities, bonds and credit have all risen in value, while hopes of lower US interest rates took the gold price up 8% in June in US dollar terms, reaching a five year high. And therein lies the rub. Global bond markets are signaling sharply decelerating economic activity, with $13 trillion marking a new high level of negative-yielding government bonds, and also the need for immediate rate cuts, with a full 1% of easing over the next twelve months now priced into US rates. Equities, meanwhile, march blithely on, seemingly blind to the risk of profits coming under pressure as economic activity slows. It seems very hard for both these markets simultaneously to be right, and at Ruffer our tradition has always been to focus on the mousetrap rather than the cheese, hence our reluctance to raise the fund's equity exposure from its present level of around 38%.

Whereas in May equities were clearly spooked by the US-China trade spat, June's recovery owed something both to interest rate hopes and to heightened expectations that a trade deal might be struck at the G20 meeting in Osaka. A commitment emerged that talks should be resumed, but specifics and details were conspicuously light.

Unsurprisingly the fund's credit protections suffered a small loss in June as optimism returned. We would, though, be very surprised if slower economic and profits growth did not bring about higher borrowing spreads and downgrades in corporate credit. Not only are 50% of outstanding investment grade corporate bonds rated BBB, but if corporate credit were assessed on borrowing ratios alone, 45% of the entire stock of investment grade bonds would be junk. Furthermore, benign borrowing data for the aggregate corporate sector disguises increasingly skewed distributions of profitability and debt. While at present investors seem happy to bid up credit on the basis of a benign interest rate outlook, investors seem equally content to ignore precisely why the interest rate profile has changed, viz slower growth. This investor myopia entirely convinces us of the need for the fund to carry protection against a deterioration in credit markets.

The fund's prospectus and key investor information documents are provided in English and available on request or from www.ruffer.co.uk. Please note that LF Ruffer Absolute Return Fund is a UK UCITS and is not registered for distribution in any country other than the UK. In line with the Prospectus, it is possible that at any one time the LF Ruffer Absolute Return Fund may invest more than 35% of its assets in transferable securities issued or guaranteed by an EEA state, one or more local authorities, a third country or a public international body to which one or more EEA States belong. The only aforementioned securities where Ruffer would currently consider holding more than 35% would be UK or US government issued transferable securities.

Investment objective

The fund aims to achieve low volatility and positive returns in all market conditions from an actively managed portfolio of equities or equity related securities (including convertibles), corporate and government bonds and currencies. Capital invested is at risk and there is no guarantee that a positive return will be delivered over any one or a number of twelve-month periods. The fund may also invest in collective investment schemes, cash, money market instruments and derivatives and forward transactions. Pervading this objective is a fundamental philosophy of capital preservation. In selecting investments the fund will adopt a stock picking approach and will not adopt any investment weightings by reference to any benchmark.
