LF Ruffer Japanese Fund

Providing capital growth by investing in a portfolio of Japanese equities

During the period from 1 July to 30 September the price of the fund's 'C' accumulation shares increased by 0.7% while the FTSE Japan Total Return Index grew by 1.6% in sterling but fell -1.2% in yen. The top contributors to performance over the quarter were Hoya, Daiichi Sankyo, Hamamatsu Photonics, GMO Internet, and Lifenet Insurance. The largest detractors were Sony, NEC, Orix, Shimadzu, and Mitsubishi Electric.

Despite ending the quarter broadly where we began, the performance in between was anything but steady. Global markets remained volatile, hyper-sensitive to any scrap of inflation data or crumb of Fed speak. In Japan, this was no different. The dramatic depreciation of the yen against the dollar fuelled speculation ahead of the July Monetary Policy Meeting that there might be a change in policy away from yield curve control. However, there was no modification, and the consensus is that significant policy change may only take place after Governor Kuroda's exit in April 2023. Disheartened, the market turned its sights on the Ministry of Finance and whether they might directly intervene in the currency market to stop the yen's slide. They duly obliged, dipping into their foreign currency reserves for the first time since 1998. Though the yen immediately strengthened sharply, it took just two days to retrace its steps back to pre-intervention levels. The market called their bluff. Japan remains caught in a delicate balance; on the one hand, a rare chance to allow desired levels of inflation to bed in, ending decades of deflation; and on the other, inviting imported inflation to overshoot as the yen is weighed down by capped rates.

Whilst it has been a lively quarter on the macro front, it is important to stress that we do not seek to trade these events. Our strategy remains to conduct in-depth research on companies and sectors to uncover attractively valued equities with multi-year investment cases. We remain concentrated in high quality, highly liquid names with strong balance sheets. As macro-minded as we get is to avoid low gross margin businesses that can easily have their profits wiped out by modest cost inflation. Similarly, those companies with high piles of debt to refinance at rising rates face headwinds.

However, this discipline has not protected the fund's performance of late. Versus the peak in September 2021 the fund's 'C' accumulation shares are down -23.2%; the second largest drawdown since inception. One might think this is cause for pessimism, but on closer inspection of the underlying holdings we think it is optimism that should prevail. Many of these companies have excellent longterm track records, almost all have no financial risk, and the vast majority tend to take share in turbulent times such as these. Valuations have come in somewhat, but the operations are more our concern. We are positive on the outlook for corporate Japan, and especially for those companies in which we are part owners.
